ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

Karnataka state has bestowed with 5.76 lakh ha of inland water resources, 8000 ha of brackish water, 2.38 lakh ha of water logged and alkaline area, and 313.02 km of coastline with 27,000 sq. km of continental shelf. With these rich marine and inland resources, the state has a tremendous potential for economic growth and social development, which is yet to be completely utilized. Moreover, a constantly rising demand and consumption of fish and their products have considerably altered the approaches and action plans in the fisheries sector. Hence, there is a challenge to fulfil the demands of nutritious, safe, and affordable fish and fisheries products through the production by adapting advanced technologies along with the sustainable development and conservation of aquatic resources.

The expected target group of delegates comprises:

- Students and Faculty of Fish and Fisheries Sciences.
- Scientists from research institutes/universities/companies.
- Administrators from fisheries boards and corporations.
- Aquaculture and seafood industry professionals

This workshop provides a unique platform for all the delegates to share their knowledge and experiences for maximizing the efficient utilization of fisheries resources for nutritional security, environmental sustainability and increasing livelihood opportunities in the state of Karnataka.
